The Big Four: The Story of Huntington, Stanford, Hopkins, and Crocker, and of the Building of the Central Pacific Oscar Lewis

"The Big Four" provides a highly readable and accurate account of the four men who built the Central Pacific, the western half of the first transcontinental railroad. Writing in The New York Times Book Review, R. L. Duffus described the work as "an absorbing history of California's moguls" and "a grand story, expertly told." First published in 1938, it remains the standard work in its field and is still in print. With index and bibliography.
