If Winter Comes Satyapal Anand

A compendium of seventy poems, this book is the fifth in a series of poetry books published by Satyapal Anand. His poetry, it has been said, is more cerebral than emotional. His poems reveal many splended splashes of color and sound. The essential mythological self of humanity as a whole sparkles in these poems. His personae are all inside his poems. "Here" and "now" and "there" and "then" combine to create the timelessness of human psyche. There is a kind of double vision, the imagist's faculty for seeing a thing at once precisely for itself and also as a part of the bigger phenomenon. In the form of a dramatic monologue, the speaker and his speech reflect the time, place, thought, social conventions, and general circumstances. Of the seventy poems, there are twelve poems directly translated from Urdu. Calling Anand's poetry as "fresh breeze", the noted critic Caroline Greene says that nothing extraordinary has happened in American poetry in the past half a century, and if an Urdu poet of the stature of Satyapal Anand has brought his treasure house to us, it is likely to change the scenario here.
