The notion of living a simple and uncluttered life with less material property sounds wonderful to a lot of people. Consider the benefits of owning fewer possessions like less to clean, less to organize, more money and of course, the time and energy for cleanups can be channeled towards other fruitful activities. I am one of those people that wish all of the above applied to my home. Some people say that I have a cleaning disorder because I wake up every morning, and before my cup of coffee I do a mini spring cleaning. Unlike others, I don't wake up and think "where in the world do I begin? I don't feel overwhelmed, defeated and anxious around the idea of decluttering my home.
