Love Theories: Short Stories Collection C Clark Jefferson

In our lifetime, we all experience it. It's that intimate tugging at our heart that controls our thoughts and our actions. Love Theories is a fly-on-the-wall moment into how others interpret and ultimately function given varying heart-to-heart interactions involving the universal feeling of LOVE. Xiomora is a bi-racial teen struggling to find her place in life. Antonia, a recent college grad, meets a disc jockey and ends up in a world of trouble. A blue-collar working Wyatt, battles an unfair system to clear his name after his wife's sudden disappearance. Majesty and Ainslie, best friends, face life challenges but with different responses.

Jordan—the fearless, punctual, and sometimes ruthless venture capitalist—stands her ground in a male dominated industry. A Barbadian girl with big dreams leaves her home country in pursuit of higher education in the United States. A career-driven Angelina, once blinded by love, tries to give Cupid's arrow another chance despite her mother's interference. And the list goes on along this journey into the lives of an interracial couple, a culturally-biased doctor, a fraud examiner who has to withdraw from a case that involves her ex-lover, a debt-ridden rich man seeker, and a single mom who left her former church on bad terms. They are each normal, everyday people; but they all are dealing with the most common and universal emotion known to man. Love Theories asks the question: How do YOU equate LOVE?.
